1. A large number of Polish Army conscripts who were scheduled for release from service in November 1954 have been retained beyond their time. All of these soldiers are employed in the mines. In most cases they are the sons of former civil servants, police officials, regular army men, professional men, and well-to-do farmers.
2. In November and December 1954 a large number of army reservists were called up. In almost every case they were engineers and technicians by profession.
3. In November and December Russian officers were observed in Lodz at all hours of the day; they were mainly engaged in shopping in the Lodz stores.
